Thursday, March 7, 2013 7:07:03 EST PM

LAKE TEMAGAMI - Submitted photo

Last Thursday, Trout Creek's Keith Linklater was fishing with John Harding, of Temagami Lake On-Ice Bungalows, and landed this 35 lb lake trout. Linklater said it was a day with strong north winds and blowing snow. He caught the fish at 10:30 a.m. in 115 feet of water on Lake Temagami. It measured 42 inches long with a girth of 25 inches. On closer inspection, Linklater found another line hanging out of its mouth.

great catch...hard to catch something that size in that deep of water and land it.
fish that size wouldn't be a prime spawner anyway.

still worthwhile to release but sometimes fishing is for consumption too.

when you think that in a lifetime most people won't catch half a dozen trophies even close to that.

So what if some of them are kept...im sure that hundreds or more are caught in gil nets daily and used for consumption and profit. So i think its almost irrelevant if this guys fish of a lifetime was released or not. If it was...good for him...if not hope his family enjoys it for many meals. I guarantee you he did not sell it.
